CONTRIBUTIONS OF SCIENTIFIC AND ORIGINAL ARTICLES

Responsibilities for Statements and Conclusions in Original Articles—Authors are responsible for all statements, conclusions and methods of presenting their subjects. These may or may not be in harmony with the views of the editorial staff. It is aimed to permit authors to have as wide latitude as the general policy of the Journal and the demands on its space may permit. The right to reduce, revise or reject any manuscript is always reserved.

Exclusive Publication—Articles are accepted for publication on condition that they are contributed solely to this Journal. Ordinarily contributors will be notified within 60 days if a manuscript is accepted for publication. Every effort will be made to return unused manuscripts.

Length of Articles—Ordinarily articles should not exceed 3,000 words (approximately 5 printed pages). Under exceptional circumstances only will articles of over 4,000 words be published.

Manuscripts—Manuscripts should be typewritten, double spaced and the original typescript plus one copy submitted.

Illustrations—Ordinarily publication of 2 or 3 illustrations accompanying an article will be paid for by California Medicine. Any number beyond this will have to be paid for by the author.

References—Should conform to the following order: name of author, title of article, name of periodical, with volume, inclusive pages, month and year—i.e.: Lee GS: The heart rhythm following therapy with digitalis. Arch Int Med 44:554-562, Dec 1942. They should be listed in the order in which they are cited in the text and numbered in sequence.

Reprints—Reprints must be paid for by the author at established standard rates.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF "LETTERS TO THE EDITOR"

The Editorial Board will be glad to receive and consider for publication letters containing information of general interest to physicians throughout the State or presenting constructive criticisms on controversial issues of the day.

SEX AFTER 60, 70, 80 OR 90

A common sexual myth is that sexual desire and ability decrease markedly after the age of 40 to 50.

Marital coitus among older men occurs considerably more frequently than is commonly realized. About three-fourths of all men between the ages of 65 and 69 experience satisfactory coition, as do about 60 percent of those between the ages of 70 and 74, and 48 percent of those between the ages of 75 and 92.

The sexual drive of older people generally follows their overall pattern of health and physical performance. Seven out of ten healthy married couples who are 60 or over are sexually active. The consistent clinical observation is that in both men and women the ones with the strongest sex drive during youth retain the greatest sex drive and virility in old age. Another means of retaining vigorous sexual capacity is a consistent pattern of sexual intercourse through the years of marriage. Once interest is allowed to wane, it is difficult to rekindle.

Studies of older men show that frequency of marital intercourse ranges from one to four times a month, with about 25 percent engaging in coitus four times a month. . . . Over 90 percent of the older men studied reported no physical disability that interfered with frequency of sexual activity. The factors that most often deter sexual activity in older people are psychological—a feeling of shame and guilt for having sexual needs and drives and the erroneous notion that older men are naturally unable to perform sexually. . . .

There is little evidence that aging produces any decline in the sexual capacity of women until possibly quite late in life. Apparently women struggle through the years of marriage (with some success) to throw off the inhibitory shackles forged by the taboos of their early sex education. Once they reach their maximum sexual peak between the ages of 31 and 40, they maintain this level. By this time, however, the husband's interest in sexual intercourse typically begins to slacken with the unfortunate result of all-around frustration that frequently leads the wife to seek out other means of sexual gratification (e.g., masturbation and nocturnal dreams involving orgasm). Older women, like older men, are quite capable of sexual intercourse and other forms of sexual activity. About seven-eighths of all women aged 50, and 70 percent of those aged 60 continue to have intercourse with their husbands. Even of those women who no longer have husbands, 37 percent of the 50-year-olds, 29 percent of the 55-year-olds, and 12 percent of the 60-year-olds continue to experience coitus.

Many women past 60 avoid having an orgasm because of the painful uterine cramping they often experience afterward. This pain can be relieved by taking the proper combination of estrogen and progesterone to correct the imbalance in the sex steroid level caused by the aging process. However, despite some obvious and predictable physical changes resulting from aging, there are apparently no physiological factors that should prevent a woman in her postmenopausal years from continuing satisfactory sexual expression with the same frequency of her younger years.
